

Hi,
I'm a legless
lizard.

But most people
just call me
a snake.

I guess its not their fault.

To most people, it is impossible to tell us apart just by looking at us.

Still hurts though.

I just wish
I could tell people that I'm not a snake.

But, I'm a legless
lizard.
People can't really understand my language.

It's nearly impossible for me to tell them.

Even if I could tell them, I'm not sure it would help.

They might not listen to me.

They might say things like:

"There's no such thing as legless
lizards!"

"Isn't it just easier
if you let people
call you a
snake?"

"How do you know you're not a snake? You look like one to me!"

"Does it really matter
if people call you a snake? It's not that big of a problem!"

I think that would be a lot
worse.

Going through the stress of letting people know...

Only for them to keep calling me
a snake anyway.

