Who We Are

Home to world-class libraries, radical thinkers, and a thriving creative scene, Manchester is a city built on stories. From Anthony Burgess to Lemn Sissay, Jeanette Winterson to Emmeline Pankhurst — our literary heritage continues to inspire new generations to write, create, and connect.

Our flagship event is Festival of Libraries, bringing together all 10 boroughs of Greater Manchester for a 5 day celebration of our world class libraries - which are a huge part of what makes Manchester a UNESCO City of Literature.

Manchester City of Literature

“It feels wonderful to be part of something much bigger than ourselves and to feel able to do things like put on music in a library, which people don’t expect from our space.”

“It’s a lot of extra work but that work pays off. This year we were able to give our residents experiences we’d never be able to let them have without the festival.”

PR support

We're inviting forward-thinking PR organisations to join us in helping to connect communities throughout the region to libraries and literature.

- To present the eclectic library network in Greater Manchester, both historic and contemporary, as one of the strengths and assets of the city-region
- To encourage attendance and participation at Festival of Libraries events
- To promote the positive benefits of library membership and engagement with libraries to wellbeing, confidence, belonging and learning
- To raise awareness of Manchester's UNESCO designation

---

Deliverables

Primary audiences:
Regional news,
consumer, lifestyle,
cultural and tourist media

Secondary audiences:
stakeholders, national,
councillors and policy makers.

“Every time I’m surprised by how many events there are as part of the festival. There’s plenty of things happening, at libraries I’ve never been to, and it makes me want to check those places out!”

“A lot of the events are participatory, which feels so different from other literary festivals.”
